2005 Research Discussion Breakfast Series

This year, the Center for Technology in Government will continue our series of Research Discussion Breakfasts designed to air research-in-progress on a variety of government IT topics. These discussion breakfasts allow the opportunity for us to share our research findings and offers an opportunity for participants to share the successes, challenges, and best practices working on government IT issues every day.

February 16th, 8:30-9:30 a.m.

Challenges and Opportunities of Cross-Agency Information Integration.

CTG Deputy Director Theresa Pardo will present aspects of the Center's research on information integration and facilitate a discussion about the opportunities and challenges of sharing information across agencies and levels of government.

April 13th, 8:30-9:30 a.m.

Exploring State-Local Networks and Relationships.

CTG Program Manager Meghan Cook will present the Center's work of exploring the issues of information networks connecting state agencies and local governments.
