

Concluding Remarks

In conclusion, this report summarizes the results of a survey which aimed to understand what factors and issues come into play in cross-boundary information sharing initiatives in the public sector. We propose that the results of this survey support the existence of a comprehensive set of factors that influence government CBI initiatives. In addition, the results of our preliminary analysis of this survey highlight a number of factors that we believe are worthy of further study. Overall, the identification of these factors contributes to the information sharing literature and provides useful ideas for the practitioner world.
